New Hanover County Predictive Analytics and Risk Factors

New Hanover County is the first in the state to use groundbreaking predictive analytics to identify and track risk factors for children. By integrating data from a variety of sources, such as criminal justice and public health databases, the system will alert DSS workers to possible changes to a child's risk while that child is in their charge.

Catawba County ACE (Advocates for Children in Education) Social Workers

The ACE team works to address psychosocial, health and emotional/behavioral issues that interfere with a child's ability to learn in the classroom. Home visits, classroom observation and consultation, individual and group counseling, and case management services address barriers and link students and families with social services or other appropriate resources. ACE social workers serve five elementary schools and one middle school.

Partnership for Community Prosperity Cleveland County

Cleveland County's collaborative, long-term health improvement initiative is addressing social factors impacting community health and starts with children. Based in an elementary school, the program makes use of existing resources to address areas in need of improvement: the number of single-parent households, the number of children in poverty, the number of teens giving birth, and workforce readiness.

Transylvania County Early Childhood Initiative

This partnership of agencies and nonprofits was the result of an effort that began with an analysis of data about citizens ages 0-5 and helped to establish a common understanding of issues impacting young children. The ECI works to collaborate at a local level and advocate at state and federal levels in ways that will improve the lives of children in the county.

Better Beginnings for Bertie's Children

This county-funded initiative that grew out of Race to the Top involves a collaboration with DSS, Rural Health and the school system. Program leaders sponsor, train and coordinate the delivery of child and family support services such as Mother Read and Father Read, pre- and post-natal home visits, and the Positive Parenting Program.
